DEFINING THE TERM

Monopoly, in the United States, is a word with an unpleasant meaning. This is Webster's definition: The exclusive right, privilege or power of selling or purchasing a given commodity or service in a given market; hence, often in popular use, any such control of a commodity, service or traffic in a given market as enables the one having such control to raise the price fixed by free competition.

Americans object to business monopolies and remain distrustful of them even when they're under government regulation. They have given little attention to labor monopolies, however, for the good reason the latter haven't seemed powerful enough to affect consumers directly.

But today, because of government concern with the problem of building construction, they're finally getting attention. In many quarters it is being pointed out that unless potential consumers in the building market can get more material and more labor for the money they have to spend, new construction will lag.

Building trades unionists, it is proposed, could help to solve their part of the problem by agreeing to an annual wage for their members equivalent to the total of their relatively high hourly wages—by selling more labor for the same amount of money, thereby reducing the cost of labor in building construction.

Thus, it seems probable that building trades unionists are going to be used freely as examples in the country's first spontaneous forum on the effect of labor monopoly on enterprise. It is a role they probably won't relish, but they're stuck with it. Discussion of the effect of unionism on consumers was bound to take place sooner or later.

GAY DECEIVERS

Tax relief is the issue of the hour.
Tax relief for whom?
No one has mentioned any tax relief for consumers of things that bear hidden consumer taxes. No one is talking about tax relief for white collar workers or blue shirt workers.

There has been nothing said about lightening the tax burden in general. In fact, President Roosevelt said in his message at the beginning of the special session that those who advocate savings in the cost of government are barking up the wrong tree because they cannot answer the question—"which functions of government do you advocate cutting off?"

There is not going to be any tax relief. There may be and should be certain readjustments in taxes imposed for the purpose of reform which are discouraging enterprise. To the extent that such readjustments entail decreases of revenue, new taxes will be necessary if government is to approach a balance of income and expenditure.

These things are worth mentioning because congressmen like to do nothing better than to talk about tax relief, always a popular position to take. They are talking about it now, but what they really mean is readjustment of certain tax schedules imposed for reform purposes. There will be no tax relief; there can be none while government remains committed to the proposition that it can and must support the people, instead of expecting them to support it.

FLASHBACK

Apropos of the soul-searching popular at the moment, it may be worth pointing out that one of the things which made Americans start to ask about whys and wherefores was the new deal's unannounced transition from licking the depression to making over the social order. It placed a strain on confidence.

This was the course of the transition. In 1933, 1934 and 1935, even diehards still believed the "war on depression" justified a great many things they didn't like.

In 1936, they began to suspect the house was being burned down to rescue the child. They began to catalogue evidence that the emergency was being used as an excuse to institute a new social plan. In 1937, they were sure of it. The new deal was trying "to improvise a revolution."

Politicians had tried to put over a fast one. They did not take the people into their confidence, but tried to outwit them. It was a smooth scheme, but it didn't make allowances for the fact that nothing puts an American on guard like realizing suddenly he has met up with a slicker.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Memories of the news rooms: The new reporter with "New York experience" and a Greek letter class pin. Making out the payroll for state correspondence and hiking the ante for the fellow in your home town. Abe's three-cent lunch room across the alley. Phil's Place on the corner.

Trembling old Mr. Skeggs, who wore a skull cap and sat in a far-away corner clipping "time copy" from exchanges. Once a foreign correspondent for the New York Herald, Elmer Farr, who traveled with the ball club and carried binoculars over his shoulders to the races.

Asking for a raise as telegraph editor and being promoted to assistant managing editor instead—realizing a few days later the only change was in title. The press association telegraph operator who never failed to show up, no matter how terrific the hang-over.

The annual arrival of Dex Fellows with plenty of free circus tickets—even a pair for your barber and bartender. Andy, the crack stereotyper, who could not read nor write. Jake Orfit, the composing room foreman, who could cuss a blue streak and did several times daily.

The all night election vigil and the publisher treating everybody to sandwiches and coffee at dawn. Calming the rough guy who came in roaring to lick the editor. Miss Tessie Blotz, who wrote the sob sister stuff under the pseudonym Millicent D'Orsay. Eddie Knapp, the dressy photo-engraver, in love with Irene, the chief telephone operator. Veteran copy readers who ticked off their headline letters in finger taps on the desk top. The sacred cows—unmentionable incidents and persons—that cost a job to mention.

The copy boy who tipped us off every morning when the managing editor swung from his trolley car at the corner—and the sudden furious activity as he walked to his desk. The dramatic editor who came to work at 9 o'clock—and the advance men who often brought their stars to see him. Algy, the music editor, who arrived one morning after a week of Fall Festival reporting and twittered: "Fellows, I'm actually drunk with rhythm."

The chief editorial writer who spoke to few of us, wore eye-glasses with a dangling black ribbon and lived at the Civic Club. The literary editor who was the luckiest crack shooter on the staff. Mrs. Wickham, the fussy wife of the publisher, who came in every few months or so to raise Hail Columbia with important executives. The gang on the Lobster Trick that we never saw save at press club banquets.

Members of the staff who went to Park Row, where we all longed to go—and seemed invariably to make good. City idols for those of us in the out country news rooms: Richard Harding Davis and Frank Ward O'Malley. The occasional whiz who would be assistant police court reporter for a few days and then show up in the managing editor's chair. Then somehow would vanish just as quickly. The bleating type of city editor who pounded his desk and belittled at cubs and who generally got what was coming to him in the end—the gateandoblivion.

The fear of the Blue Envelope as we neared 40. Going to the offices direct from some bar after a night of wassail—and somehow getting through the day. Landing a scoop in the days when a scoop was noticed without calling attention to it. The excitement over the first offer of a New York job—and the terrific let-down when you decided to stay on awhile for more experience.

The first assignment on an out-of-town murder story. Passing the police lines with a press card in the hat band. Calling the police chief by his first name and going into the Mayor's private office unannounced. Getting the first by-line on a Page One story. The proof-readers who covered up our mistakes and often saved our jobs—and their quiet Mr. Chips attitude toward life. The ribald stories that were told in the art room. And the new office boy that was sent to the composing room for a "bucket of editorials" and came back with a back-breaking load of linotype slugs. The sinking feeling when the editor-in-chief's secretary came to tell you he wanted to see you in his office. And it generally meant what you thought—the old ball and chain!

DIET OF INVALID

TO CARE for an invalid is at all times a difficult task. Not so long ago I told you how necessary it is to prevent bed sores for one who has a long illness. But even when recovery is in sight there continue to be problems. What to feed the patient is always puzzling.

Today I want to tell you how to plan the diet for the patient who is getting better and stronger. It is difficult to provide tempting and nourishing foods at this period of the illness. In the hospital there is a trained dietitian to manage. But it is more difficult at home.

The doctors and nurses speak of three distinct types of invalid diets. These are known as the "liquid," "soft" and "light" diets. The liquid diet is the most easily digested. It contains certain amounts of nourishment, but in such form as not to require effort on the part of the digestive system.

The liquid diet includes hot and cold milk, fermented milk, malted milk and cocoa. Occasionally, cream soup, broth, milk soup or clear meat soup may be added. Fruit juices may be taken unless otherwise ordered by the doctor.

Of course, the liquid diet is purposely planned to be limited in quantity. It is prescribed where the physical condition will not permit more generous feeding. If a patient can tolerate more food, perhaps the soft diet is given. This consists of easily-digested and nourishing foods.

The soft diet includes well-cooked cereals, eggs and milk, thoroughly cooked and possibly strained vegetable, fruit juices, stewed fruits, ice cream, junket, custards and gelatin. If this diet is not considered adequate by the doctor, he will order more nourishment.

He may advise a light diet, which contains foods that are more solid. They should be well chosen and nutritious, carrying those elements that are essential for tissue building. The foods selected should be rich in substances that supply energy and heat, as well as the necessary vitamins and minerals. Above all, they should be thoroughly cooked and easily digested.

Light Diet
The light diet may contain thoroughly-cooked vegetables, broiled and baked lean fish, broiled and cooked chicken, broiled lamb chops, roast beef or lamb. It includes potatoes, rice, macaroni, soups, simple desserts, bacon, fruit juices and stewed fruits. Additional foods may be added as satisfactory progress is made toward complete recovery.

In caring for an invalid it is well to keep in mind these dietary distinctions. Your doctor will advise you as to the most suitable diet. Try to make the food look appetizing in appearance as well as in taste. Encourage the invalid to eat so that he may gain strength.

A.—For full particulars, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.
Mrs. C. A. T. Q.—Can anything be done for "drop foot"?
A.—This condition requires the personal attention of a doctor. Operation is advised in some cases. Consult an orthopedist for his opinion and advice.
Mrs. F. S. Q.—What do you advise for arthritis? Is massage helpful? Are acid fruits harmful? My one arm is stiff and very painful.
A.—For full particulars, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat the question. Application of heat should give increased comfort and relief. Acid foods would be very apt to aggravate the trouble.

Your Last Hour

There is an expression in most interment services which strikes us with the weight of this truth—"In the midst of life we are in death."

It is merely a striking way of saying that any hour may be our last hour. Jesus' kindness of concern was attested by His warning that that hour may assail us with the suddenness of a thunder-clap or may steal on us as a thief in the night.

But "when" of that hour is not the important thing, nor is its possible suddenness our grave concern. For men, whose lives are well ordered, tread on a pathway of the best, they know, whose attitudes are kind and helpful and whose relationships with God and man are steady and secure, there need be no fear of the time or the unexpectedness of the last hour.

Yet where is the minister whose experience is not frequently weighted with the woe of the man or woman who has neglected or rejected right ways of living and all the means of grace which God has arranged for their comfort and assurance in every hour, including the last hour, "Lord, save us we perish!" and "What must I do to be saved?" The Church has the only satisfying answer to that cry. Heeding its message has saved countless millions from that eleventh hour shriek of despair. It may save you. That is one reason why you are invited to hear that message in the church of your choice.

Complete services for the church and announcements for the week are as follows:

Sunday school 9:45; (I Corinthians 3:10-15); Charles W. Youitz, superintendent.

There is a clarion call for workers in the Kingdom of God. There is a place for every sincere Christian to labor for the betterment of this world and to assist in bringing in the Kingdom of heaven. There is no better place for a Christian to work than in the Church. The work of God is primarily carried on through the agency of the Church, which has been divinely established. Workers for God must be willing to go through some preparation for their labors. Sincerity must be the ever-present mark of God's workers. Willingness must be the spirit of those who labor in God's vineyard.

Morning worship 11; sermon: "Given Unto You."

"The spirit of benevolence has always dominated the attitudes of Christian people. The joy and happiness of giving has been the motive of some of the finest services that the world has ever seen. Jesus was happiest when He was spending life and strength for others. For all this action and attitude there is compensation. God does not forget those who are loyal to His Kingdom. Christian benevolence has remuneration that the selfish and grasping person will never experience. There is a certain return that comes to the Christian that shares with God the blessings that have come along the way of life."

Stars Setting Movie Precedent

Joan Blondell

Dick Powell

Maurice Merryfield

Despite the popular belief that marriage and careers are hardly compatible in Hollywood, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell are proving that two stars can surmount all obstacles. One of their main ambitions is to co-star in a movie together but the movie moguls are fearful that the fact that they are husband and wife would take the romantic edge off such a combination. When interviewed by Maurice Merryfield, International Illustrated News writer, Mrs. Powell explained that Dick was really the business man of the family and that her career was secondary to her interests as a wife and mother.

The Home Kitchen

CANAPES

THE CONSTANT controversy about the word "Hors d'oeuvres" and an English counterpart for the term has brought us several requests for information on the many foreign words and expressions used in the kitchen and on the menu. Hors d'oeuvres, smorgasbord and canape are all terms in constant use.

The canape is a small open sandwich that may be made of any bread, wafer or cracker cut into any shape and spread with any savory material. Hors d'oeuvres are usually passed at the table while you help yourself to smorgasbord at one big table. The smorgasbord contains most of the items that go to make up the hors d'oeuvres as well as additional cheeses and meats.

Then there is always the argument about a ragout, a goulash and a saimi. Well, all of these words refer to meat or poultry with vegetables and much high seasoning. Then readers ask the difference between a plain pot roast and a sauerbraten. Well, the meat for a sauerbraten is soaked for a number of days in vinegar and spices, then browned and cooked for some hours in a sweet-sour sauce. Plain beef cooked for some time with vegetables is a pot roast.

Other Terms

Florentine and benedict are two terms that often appear on the restaurant menu. Florentine indicates spinach and a white sauce. Eggs benedict is a combination of poached egg, hollandaise sauce, toasted muffin and grilled ham.

Au gratin, as it is used here, is something of a misnomer. It really means that one of the ingredients is browned crumbs, but in this country it has come to indicate "with cheese." When crumbs are used in the preparation of a dish, then the word "scalloped" should be used. Really the word is "scalloped" but the shorter version is generally employed. Hollandaise sauce is made with lemon juice, while Bechamel sauce is a concoction of cream sauce with egg yolks. Sauce Vinaigrette, a great favorite with the gourmet, is made with chopped parsley, pickles and capers added to the French dressing foundation.

Parole Board Quiz Will Open Monday

COLUMBUS, Nov. 20.—Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy, seeking to determine if anyone received fees for helping obtain the parole of prisoners in Ohio penal institutions, requested today an audit of prisoners' funds at Ohio penitentiary and the Leavenworth prison farm.

The request, submitted to State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, said, "I would appreciate receiving from you an itemized list of the names of each prisoner who has had, or does have at the present time, any money on deposit at the prisons."

The attorney general could use pertinent information of this kind in a grand jury investigation of state parole board activities, opening here Monday.

He declined to comment on his request to the auditor.

Private Utilities Buying TVA Power

CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 20.—The Tennessee Valley authority contended before a three-judge federal court Friday that its power program has not created uneeded electric energy and that a number of the 18 attacking private utilities have "not hesitated to purchase TVA power in large quantities."

James F. Barry, vice president of the Alabama Power Co., said on cross-examination that his company had bought "much power from Wilson and Morris dams," TVA projects.

Such power furnished in turn to the Georgia Power Co., the Mississippi Power Co., the Gulf Power Co., the Tennessee Electric Power Co. and the Birmingham Electric Co., he testified.

These Beauties Singled Out by Cupid!

Four young ladies currently in the headlines are these four beauties, two of whom were just married and two others who are planning to wed. Extended romance of Betty Grable and Jackie Coogan, Hollywood celebrities, was sealed when they obtained their wedding license. Two others prominent in show business made the headlines when it was announced that Eleanor Holm and Billy Rose would marry as soon as they are divorced from Art Jarrett, bandleader, and Fannie Brice, veteran vaudeville star. Another publicized romance is that of Jesse Livermore, Jr., son of the Wall Street operator, who took as his bride pretty Evelyn Sullivan. Young Livermore was in the news two years ago when he was accidentally shot by his mother. Cupid's course has not been so smooth for Martha Barkley Ryan, however. This attractive young bride of Basil Ryan, grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan, copper king, is fighting an annulment suit brought by young Ryan who claims the ceremony was performed while he was intoxicated and followed a one-day friendship.

Rose's Romance Blossoms

Billy Rose, the little man who creates big shows, is pictured with Eleanor Holm Jarrett, his star of the Cleveland aquacade. Rose announced that he will wed Mrs. Jarrett when his wife, Fannie Brice, secures a divorce. Jarrett, an orchestra leader, will have to give Mrs. Jarrett her freedom.

YALE-HARVARD GAME TOPS TODAY'S GRID CARD

Dayton And Akron Close Seasons Today In Dead Heat For Ohio Laurels

Flyers Meet Marshall's Tough Thundering Herd, While Rubber City Zippers Invade Xavier; Reserve Takes On John Carroll

Dayton and Akron swung down the home stretch in a dead heat today for the unofficial gridiron championship of Ohio with the flyers taking on Marshall at the Gem City battle grounds, and the Rubber City Zippers invading Cincinnati to do battle with Xavier university.

Should both the Zippers and Flyers win their games, they would wind up the season tied up for the honors. So far both have seven wins in eight starts.

To the Flyers, a victory would also mean the Buckeye conference title. Even a tie would give them the championship while Marshall's "Thundering Herd" will find it necessary to win to take the undisputed championship.

Regardless of the outcome of the Dayton and Akron contests, the Toledo Rockets will have had their satisfaction by virtue of wins over both of the top ranking outfits.

At Cleveland the Western Reserve-John Carroll contest also promises plenty of action. Carroll will go into the game with one big psychological advantage. For Tom Conley and his boys this is the big game of the year. If they can win, the defeats by Case, Baldwin-Wallace, Dayton and Akron will be forgotten. The season will be a sensational success.

For Reserve it is just another football game to warm up for their all important clash with the traditional rivals—the Case Rough Riders—on Turkey day.

With Ohio State at Ann Arbor, Mich., to wind up its Big Ten campaign against the Wolverines, only five other games are scheduled in Ohio, four of them Ohio conference battles and of no general interest since Baldwin-Wallace has sewed up the championship.

Games in the Ohio league which will end activities for 1937 will see Marietta at Ashland, Heidelberg at Wittenberg, Denison at Oberlin and Muskingum at Mount Union. Washington and Jefferson will tangle with Wooster in a non-league skirmish.

GOULD GLANCES AT LINEUP FOR ALL-AMERICANS

Tony Matisi Strongest Player Ever Coached By Sutherland

By ALAN GOULD
NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Notes from our All-America folder: Marshal (Biggie) Goldberg, sparkplug of Pitt's team, came to college as a left-handed passer and left-footed kicker but was made over so he could handle the left halfback job.

Tony Matisi, veteran Panther tackle, is the strongest man to play for Pitt in Jack Sutherland's regime and the fastest big man since Jim MacMurdo in 1931.

The best end on the Pitt squad and perhaps the best in the country, Bill Daddio, has been kept out of nearly all major action by a knee injury. He has one more year to go.

Davey O'Brien, 150-pound Texas Christian quarterback, has played all but 20 minutes of eight consecutive games and directly figured in two-thirds of Harned Frog offensive with his kicking, passing and running.

Ohio State coaches rate Davey the "toughest little man" they've seen. Two all-stars who also rate classroom accolade are Andy Bershak, North Carolina's studious end, and Colorado university's famed Whizzer White, who made Phi Beta Kappa this year.

The Whizzer wants to follow his brother, Sam, to Oxford as a Rhodes scholar. Carl Hinkle, Vanderbilt's captain and center, has played a dozen 60-minute games during his three varsity years.

Fritz Pollard, Jr., Olympic point-winner for the U. S. A. in the high hurdles, is the backfield star for North Dakota State this year. Montana's Milton Popovich star of a team that hasn't been beaten since October, 1936, has averaged better than seven yards per crack from scrimmage this season, which puts him in class with Clint Frank of Yale.

Goldberg of Pitt and White of Colorado as a ground-gainer. The logical backfield companion for Fordham's Alexander Wojciechewicz in the all-star unprejudicable class is Ray Mickovky, 210-pound fullback for the Case school of Applied Science at Cleveland.

He's rated All-Ohio conference honors for two years and probably will make it three, including a bid for "Little All-America" distinction.

Villanova's play-wrecking duo, John Wysocki at end and John Mellus at tackle, have been play-mates since they were four years old at Hanover, Pa. Only break in their grid partnership came when Wysocki delayed his college entry one year, during which he worked in coal mines at Wilkes-Barre.

Together they have blocked five punts this season, four of which resulted in Villanova touchdowns.

Second In Show
TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20.—Flying High, owned by T. R. Scheffer of Dover, placed second yesterday in the combination harness and saddle horse event of the Royal Winter Fair horse show.

BOWLING RESULTS

The high-geared Deming team of the Class B Federal Bowling league banged out another of its good scores at the Masonic temple alleys last night to whip Brownie's Amoco Gas quintet in three games and increase its lead over the second-place Columbiana County Engineers, who dropped two games to the National Sanitary Office.

Demings rolled a 2642 three-game score for a new league record, bettering its own former mark of 2605. The combination of three wins for Demings and the two defeats administered the Engineers boosted the Pumpmakers lead to five games.

Two special matches at the Grate Recreation alleys last night saw Mullins Die Room defeat the Columbiana All-Stars, 2351 to 2150, and Grate Recreation win over the Salem Tigers, 2449 to 2317.

Damascus Girls Triumph But Boys Lose To Berlin Quint

DAMASCUS, Nov. 20.—Goshen High school boys and girls basketball teams opened their 1937-38 seasons at Berlin Center last night with the Goshen lasses winning, 19 to 12, and the Goshen boys losing, 18 to 15.

The Goshen boys were held to four field goals in their game, but managed to keep close behind Berlin Center throughout the contest by converting most of their free throws. Berlin lads led at the half, 10 to 8.

Burton led the Goshen girls to victory, scoring nine of her team's 19 points.

The Goshen teams will play Berlin boys and girls outfits here next Wednesday night.

Leading Intersectional Game Will Send Fordham Against St. Mary's Gaels

Harvard Seeks First Victory Over Yale Since 1930; Syracuse Out To Beat Colgate and End 13-Year Losing Streak

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—They've got that old feeling that Harvard can lick Yale up at Cambridge.

And that, plus the sentiment and tradition that yearly is draped around two of college football's oldest and proudest names, makes the clash of the Bulldog and the gent in the funny hat the nation's No. 1 game on the last and perhaps most interesting "big day" of the season.

The Yales and the Harvards first got together for a little friendly mayhem in 1875. The dark Blue has won 32 of the games to the Crimson's 17 with six ending in ties.

Albie Booth of Yale dropped kicked a field goal to beat the Johnnies in 1931. Since then the Harvards have tried vainly to take one.

This may be the day. At Syracuse Ossie Klemm's first eleven is "up" for the Colgate game and the end of a 13-year losing streak against the Maroon. Colgate is struggling to come back after a miserable season.

Fordham, bidding hard for the Rose Bowl, meets the last of its intersectional opponents in St. Mary's. The Gaels aren't as tough as usual but the winners of this one will know they've been in a ball game.

Columbia, striving vainly to get out of the mire, plays unbeaten Dartmouth. Holy Cross entertains Carnegie Tech, mighty Pitt takes on Penn State, Princeton meets Navy and Temple tests Villanova in other major contests along the eastern front.

Notre Dame, facing a possible letdown after the Army triumph, encounters a tough Northwestern eleven in the midwest's extra-conference standout, with Nebraska vs. Iowa and Marquette vs. Duquesne also in the fore.

The Big Ten presents a three-star finale in Michigan-Ohio State, Illinois-Chicago and Indiana-Purdue.

Stanford and California meet in a crossroads game. A victory for either team will send it on the way to Pasadena and the Rose Bowl, a tie will send the selectors to the most convenient padded cell.

California at Los Angeles plays Southern Methodist, Washington encounters Oregon and Oregon State clashes with Washington State in other feature games.

Deep peace broods over most of the south for Alabama's Crimson tide is becalmed. But Georgia and Auburn, Florida and Georgia Tech, and Tulane and Sewanee should make it interesting. The southwest chimes in with Texas Christian and Rice, Baylor and Loyola (Los Angeles) and Oklahoma and Oklahoma A. and M.

FLOODS COMING, SAYS FORECAST

Ohio University Expert Bases Calculations On Sun Spots

(By United Press)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18.—The flood woes heaped upon the Pittsburgh district during the past two years are by no means the last, according to an Ohio university professor who bases his calculations on sun spots, the rings on tree trunks and available weather data.

Prof. E. L. Moseley, of Bowling Green State university, predicts that the big floods of 1936 and 1937, which caused extensive damage in this section, will continue for the next three years.

"The next three years will see more than the average amount of rain over a large part of the eastern half of the United States, and over the large drainage area of the Ohio river and its tributaries the rain from September, 1936, to December, 1940, is likely to exceed that of any equal period since the great floods of 1883 and 1884," Moseley said.

1948 Year of Deluge

"The year 1942 also will be wet, while 1948 is likely to exceed all previous years since 1853."

Moseley's study of weather cycles goes back 180 years. There are no weather statistics that far back, but the rings on tree trunks provide information. The rings are thick in wet years and thin during dry ones. Sun spots are also a valuable aid in the study of weather conditions.

"Weather cycles on the earth are dependent upon cyclic changes on the sun," Moseley asserted. "The sun spots may not be the most important of such phenomena, but they are the most easily observed and afford us a means of timing changes in solar radiation which influence our climate."

In 90-Year Cycles

Sun spots, he said, occur every 11 to 15 years. With this information as a basis, Moseley figured that it is 90 years from the beginning of one wet period to the beginning of the next.

As a result of these observations, he has estimated that a new wet period of 45 years started in 1936. The last wet period was from 1846 to 1891. From 1846 to 1892, there were six floods at Pittsburgh. Should conditions be the same in the present wet period, Pittsburgh might experience a big flood in 1942, because the flood of 1892, when the water reached 35.1 feet, 10.1 feet above flood level—was one of the highest on record. The St. Patrick's day flood of 1936 was 46 feet.

Explaining the difference between wet periods and dry periods, Moseley said that in wet periods there are more wet years and fewer dry ones.

The musical drama, "The Firefly," starring Jeanette MacDonald, will be the State theater attraction Sunday through Tuesday.

Engineer's Office Asks for Road Data

LISBON, Nov. 20.—Blanks have been mailed by County Engineer Robert Wheatley's office to all township trustees requesting them to provide the county office with information regarding highways, bridges and culverts within their jurisdiction.
